

Archimedia is a research and design collective examining the overlap between media, architecture and public space. David Cox is a filmmaker, lecturer and digital media artist. Molly Hankwitz is a writer, filmmaker and media artist. Other collaborators vary and are subject to change.

'Lost Cities Redux: Homage to Baghdad' by Archimedia. An outdoor [weather permitting] dual screen projection culture jam which contests the audio-visual boundaries and edges of contemporary urban space from within the clues of modern popular cinema. From a rich soundscape of cinematic samples, Archimedia cracks the attack on Iraq and other developments of recent global history using cinema's secret codes and intertextuality.
